About hearing loss

Think you may have a hearing loss?

Firstly you are not the only one. One in seven people in the UK have a hearing loss. A common perception is that hearing loss is the result of ageing. This is not necessarily true – in fact many of us aged between 40 and 60 have some degree of hearing loss. The good news is that 95% of hearing losses can be helped.

Hearing loss is easy to identify

If someone can't hear any of the following sounds, they may benefit from a hearing test:

- A watch ticking
- Turning pages of a newspaper
- The sound of footsteps
- Car engine noise
- Birdsong

The benefits of treating hearing loss

Evidence shows that patients who take active steps to manage their hearing loss are healthier than those who ignore the problem.

- They maintain their independence more easily
- Follow the advice of GPs and take an active part in managing other conditions
- Are less prone to mental health problems such as depression, memory loss and even Alzheimer's

About hearing tests

What can you do?

The first and easiest step is to get your hearing tested. A hearing test is quick, simple and painless and in most cases the results are instant.

About the hearing test

Most tests start with brief questions about the health of your ear, your general health and your lifestyle. These questions determine the cause and nature of your possible hearing loss, the effect it has on you and what solutions are likely to suit your needs.

A physical examination of your ears is then performed and will be followed by a test to measure sounds that you can hear at different pitches.

About hearing aids

Modern hearing aids are very different from most people's pre-conceptions, they are:

- Digital, cosmetic and comfortable
- Offer real benefits in a full range of situations
- Don't whistle like older aids

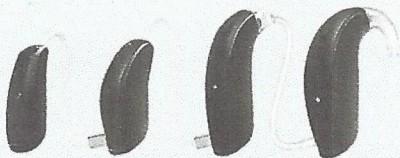

Types of hearing instruments

Different styles of hearing aids exist and suitability to each type will depend on factors such as degree of hearing loss and physical dexterity.
